Extent and Medium:	9 boxes
Name of Creator:	Faber, Michael (1929-2015) development economist

CONTEXT

Biographical/Administrative History: Michael Faber, who was educated at Eton and Oxford, worked as a claims adjuster in Japan and Korea before becoming a foreign correspondent (1954-1960). He and his family returned to Northern Rhodesia in 1964 where Faber worked as a senior economist and under-secretary in the Ministry of Finance. Faber's research on the original mining treaties enabled the Zambian government to negotiate much more favourable terms with the British South Africa Company. Faber was the director of the Commonwealth Secretariat's technical assistance group (1972-1975, 1978-1982). By this time his expertise in negotiations was widely renowned and he assisted newly independent countries with talks over minerals and debt. In 1982 Mike Faber was appointed as the director of the Institute of Development Studies at the University of Sussex.

ICS198/4/1/1 Ashanti Goldfields, Ghana: mining royalties 1983 November

Letter to R. G. Renner (Secretary for Lands and Resources, Ghana) and Kwesi Botchwey (Secretary for Finance and Economic Planning) from Mike Faber and colleagues. Summary of terms of reference of project, negotiations and revisions of royalty and fiscal regime affecting the Ashanti gold mines. Also includes memorandum "Points arising from the negotiation of the AGC regime with the IFC".

1 file

In 1983, Mike Faber was asked to provide the government of Ghana with advice about the Ghana mining code. The Ghanaian government had been negotiating with the International Finance Corporation (IFC) for support (ie a loan of approximately $120m). Before agreeing, the IFC insisted that the royalty and taxation agreements affecting the Ashanti gold mines be revised to ensure that revenues covered debt obligations. The Ghanaian government wanted any agreement regarding the Ashanti gold mines to be potentially applicable to the entire gold mining sector.
