Name of Creator:	Institute of Germanic Studies

Archival History:

Much of the material in this collection was acquired through the Research Centre for German and Austrian Exile Studies, Institute of Modern Languages Research.

CONTEXT

Biographical/Administrative History: The Institute of Germanic Studies was founded within the University of London in 1950. It is primarily a research institute, serving the needs of postgraduate students and scholars from the United Kingdom and abroad. The Institute has a wide-ranging publishing programme, including monographs, volumes of essays, conference proceedings, dissertations and bibliographies. Its programme of activities comprises lectures by guest speakers, symposia on particular authors and/or topics, readings by visiting writers, reading workshops, and colloquia for postgraduate students. The Institute also hosts the intercollegiate course leading to the MA degree in German of the University of London.

The Institute's Library holds over 87,000 volumes (nearly 500 current periodicals). It is widely recognised as the principal research collection for German in the University of London, and is the largest of its kind anywhere outside the German-speaking countries. The reference collection covers the language and literature of all periods, with outstanding holdings of journals, reference works, and contemporary writing. Its book collection starts with the printed works of the late fifteenth century and comes right up to the present, whilst its extensive manuscript and archive holdings (many of which remain unknown and unpublished) range from the mid-ninth century to contemporary poetry.

The Institute became part of the School of Advanced Study in 1994.

The Research Centre for German Exile Studies was established at the Institute in 1995, when the Institute offered a home to this new organisation, which combined the former London Research Group for German Exile Studies and the Research Centre for Germans and Austrians in Great Britain, previously at the University of Aberdeen. The work of the Centre focuses on the history of those German-speaking emigrés who found refuge in Great Britain, on their personal recollections and experiences, their reception in British society, and their enrichment of the life of their new country of residence in such varied spheres as the professions, industry and commerce, literature, art and culture, politics, publishing, the media, and the world of entertainment and leisure.

In August 2004 the Institute of Germanic Studies merged with the Institute of Romance Studies, and in August 2013 its name changed to the Institute of Modern Languages Research.

CONTENT

Scope and Content: This collection contains personal papers, correspondence, official documents and literary and autobiographical scripts created by or relating to German-speaking exiles and exile-related organisations mainly in the UK. Some of the material dates from the period before and during the Second World War, such as a biography of Hitler by Rudolf Olden in the 1930s, and records of the activities of prisoners in internment camps on the Isle of Man in the early 1940s. A significant proportion of the collection is material created in the post-war period on the subject of exile, such as autobiographical accounts of exile by individual refugees, and the research papers of the Research Centre for German and Austrian Exile Studies. There are also records (including some copies of publications) of literary and other scripts focusing on the experience of exile and the events leading to it, written by exile poets, scholars and journalists and others before and after they emigrated.

ACCESS AND USE

Language of Scripts: English, German, Hungarian, Dutch, Italian, Czech

System of Arrangement: This fonds was created by the Institute of Germanic Studies in the 1990s as a collection of material from a variety of sources related to the theme of exile. The material does not share any provenance above file- and sub-series-level groupings. These lower-level groups were arranged into two series: material created by or relating to individuals, and material created by or relating to organizations.

Conditions of Access: Open. At least 48 hours notice is required for research visits.

Conditions of Reproduction: Photocopies may be made, although this is at the discretion of the Librarian and is dependent on the nature and condition of the material. NB Do not allow copying of transcripts or recordings of oral history records (EXS.1.RCGAES.3).

EXS.2

Papers of exile-related individuals, c1900-2002

This series contains records created by or relating to individual German-speaking exiles from Nazi-occupied Central Europe (mainly Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia). Most of the material fits into one of the following two categories:

- 1) official documents, personal papers and memoirs of ordinary refugees who came to the UK in the 1930s; or
- 2) correspondence, plays, poems and other scripts (for example for radio broadcasts) of political activists, scholars, journalists, poets and other writers who went into exile in the UK and other countries. Notable amongst this material are the papers of the journalist Rudolf Olden, which include a draft copy of his biography of Hitler; poems and letters by the Austrian writer Fritz Gross; and correspondence between the British Germanic Studies scholar Professor C.P. Magill and the Austrian writer Felix Braun covering the period 1939 to 1970. There are also records of the cultural activities of internees in Mooragh Internment Camp, Isle of Man, and the autobiography of the scholar and activist Berhand Herzberg.

EXS.2.BRA.1.1 Correspondence from Felix Braun to Professor C P ('Peter') Magill and Mrs Betty Freeth, 1939-1970

(i) Requests a formal invitation for Professor Hans Liefhelm to come to England to study Shelley. (ii) Thanks for Magill's translation of his article on Stifter's Nachsommer; encloses a cutting of his poem Das syrische Weib. (iii) Suggests contacts amongst his friends (including the dancer Grete Wiesenthal and Oskar Marius Fontana) and places of interest for Magill's forthcoming visit to Vienna. (iv) Impressed by Magill's article Goethe and the Modern World. (v) Impressed by Magill's essay on the state of German literature. Mentions Michael Hamburger's translations of Hofmannsthal's verse, and his own Ode an England (1932) translated by Dorie Baker. (vi) Will send his latest article on Hoffmannsthal and the translation of his ode to England. (vii) Postcard to Betty Freeth, from Genoa. (viii) Grateful for the help and interest with his essay on Grillparzer, especially from L A Willoughby; leaving for Austria. (ix) Sends condolences on the death of Magill's father. (x) Sending two poems: Die Wiederkunft for Jethro Bithell's anthology, and his translation into German of a poem by William Blake (signed typescripts). (xi) Thanks for Magill's latest essay on Hebel. Would like to send Bithell a poem for his birthday. It is his sister Käthe Braun-Prager's 70th birthday, she has had her book Verwandelte Welt published. His play Beatrice Cenci is to appear soon. (xii) Would like offprints of his articles published in England. (xiii) Cannot help with the identification of D B; his sister has had a heart attack; would love to see England again; has [?]translated the third part of his romantic novel Der Stachel in der Seele (1948). (xiv) New Year's greetings; would love to come to England again; very grateful for Magill's introduction to Peter Branscombe. (xv) Delighted with Magill's review of his autobiography Das Licht der Welt - has begun a second volume but finding it difficult to write; had a volume Zeitgefährten published two years ago (1963); celebrates his 80th birthday soon - his prologue is to introduce the 600-year celebration of the founding of Vienna University at the Burgtheater; his play Tochter der Jairus is to be performed at the Burgtheater on his birthday and his latest poems, etc are to be published to celebrate his birthday - will send copies to Magill; enquires after Magill's own research on the Viennese Volkstheater; Betty Freeth still writes regularly; his sister is better; reading the English classics again especially Hawthorne; enquires after Willoughby; has been awarded the Grillparzerpreis by the Akademie der Wissenschaften. (xvi) Postcard with Christmas greetings - would like to see Magill and his family again. (xvii) Postcard (in English) from Schönbrunn with New Year's greetings; is now 85 years old. From various addresses, mainly in Britain and Austria. Many of the letters have explanatory notes by Professor Magill attached.

EXS.2.BRA.1.13 Obituary for Felix Braun, 1973

Official announcement of the death after a long illness of Felix Braun, made on behalf of his family whose names appear at the foot; with biographical details.

2 items

EXS.2.BRA.2 Felix Braun papers deposited by L.A. Willoughby, undated [1949-c1955]

Letter from Felix Braun in Tirol to Dr Magill, accompanying a typescript in German of FB's then unpublished 'Ode an Deutschland' and an unpublished English translation of the poem by Dora Baker. FB states that he is sending [C.P.] Magill (CPM) and Professor [L.A.] Willoughby (LAW) two of his odes, so it seems likely that CPM forwarded the letter and accompanying material to LAW, which would explain why the material has a different provenance from that in EXS.2.BRA.1. There is also a typescript of FB's poem 'Der siebzigste Geburtstag', dated 4 November 1955, with a handwritten note at the bottom from FB informing an unspecified addressee that he would soon be coming to London.

EXS.2.OLD

Rudolf Olden papers, 1933-1940, 1961, 2002

Script entitled 'Hitler, Agent der Macht' by Rudolf Olden and correspondence to and between members of the Olden family.

13 folders

EXS.2.OLD.1 Script by Rudolf Olden, 'Hitler, Agent der Macht', undated [c1935]

Script marked 'Hitler, Agent der Macht' by Rudolf Olden. The manuscript is divided up into bundles, with chapter headings including:

- I. 'Wunder in Deutschland';
- II. 'Kindheit';
- III. 'Leere Jahre';
- IV. 'Vom Hilfsarbeiter zum Kunstmaler';

- V. 'Heim ins Reich';
- VII. 'Wer ist's? Das Hätschelkind';
- VIII. 'Der Putsch. Bayern oder Reich?';
- IX. 'Auseinandersetzung mit der Reichswehr: Ehrgeizige Gesellen';
- XI. 'Phönix aus der Asche. [??] liefert Hitler';
- XII 'Aufstieg. Die stillen Arbeiter';
- XIII. 'Legalität. Man glaubt Hitler nicht';
- XIV. 'Die Gross Politik. Die Wirtschaftskrise ist an allen schuld';
- XV. 'In die Macht. Die Niederlage';
- XVI. Der Reichstag brennt. Goebbels' seltsames Tagebuch;
- XVII. 'Der 30. Juni';
- XVIII. 'Gegen Juden und [?]Rom'

Some of the chapters are handwritten but annotated 'getippt' ('typed'); others are typescripts. The chapters roughly follow the above order, but some of the bundles are not labelled, so it is not known whether they are missing or simply in a different order. In addition to the chapters listed above, one of the manuscript bundles, interlayed between chapters XIII and IX, is headed 'London, 30 July 35, 43 Portman Square'. The script as a whole may be a draft copy of the book Olden published in 1935 as 'Hitler' with Querido, Amsterdam, although this has not been verified. Previously in EXS/box2/1-3 and EXS/box3/1.

EXS.2.SMI.11 Four photographs of Tring railway station, undated [c 1980]

The photographs show the buildings at Tring railway stations, which were designed by Elisabeth Smith [ES] for British Rail. The notes of the back of one of the photographs state that they are 'square, not round', and according to the depositor, ES 'always said that her very angular designs for Tring would have held up well if they had been properly maintained and not vandalised. The photographs were taken by Mrs Richenda Barbour, one of ES's students of Fine Art or Architecture for the WEA [Workers' Educational Association]. Previously in EXS/box4/3.
