ACCOUNTANT

Introductory Note

Until 1901 the Registrar as Treasurer of the University was responsible for financial matters. By 1898 at the latest he was assisted in this duty by the Assistant Clerk to the Senate who was responsible for compiling the accounts (1). After the reconstitution of 1901 an Accounts Department was formed which initially comprised one accountant who reported to the Finance and General Purposes Committee. After the reconstitution of 1928 the Accountant reported to both the Court and the Finance and General Purposes Committee. (2)

The Accountant's Department was amalgamated in 1977 with the Management Systems Department to form the two divisions of the Department of Accounting and Administrative Computing. (3) In 1982 the two divisions were separated and became independent divisions of the Court Department. (4) On 1 October 1985 the Accounting and Management Systems Divisions ceased to be part of the Court Department and from that date reported to the Principal through the Clerk of the Senate.

IDENTITY STATEMENT

Title:	University of London Brown Animal Sanatory Institution.
Dates:	1930-1950
Level:	sub-fonds
Extent and Medium:	6 envelopes
Name of Creator:	Brown Animal Sanatory Institution

CONTEXT

Biographical/Administrative History: In 1852 Thomas Brown bequeathed a sum of money to the University for founding, 'an Institution for investigating, studying and endeavouring to cure maladies, distempers and injuries, any Quadrupeds or Birds useful to man may be found subject to.' The Senate allowed funds from the bequest to accumulate for nineteen years and in 1871 with a total sum of £33, 800 built the Brown Institution in Battersea.

The management of the Institution was under the control of a committee, which was responsible to the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows of the University of London. The Committee of Management consisted of the Vice-Chancellor, not less than six members of the Senate, 'medical men'. The Committee was required to frame bye-laws, rules and regulations, govern the finances for the maintenance of the Institution, regulate the conditions of reception of the animals and the purchase of diseased animals for the promotion of science. The business of the institution was under the direction and control of the superintendent and was conducted in two departments, the Hospital and the Laboratory.

In the Hospital, where sick animals were treated, the Superintendent had the aid of a qualified veterinary surgeon. In the Laboratory research on animal diseases, animal physiology, surgical procedures and animal nutrition was conducted under the direction of the Superintendent. Scientific investigations were also undertaken for public bodies and institutions. These included The Royal Society, The Local Government Board and The Veterinary Department of the Army. Under the terms of Thomas Brown's Will the Professor Superintendent was obliged to give at least five lectures a year in English free to the public.

At the outbreak of the Second World War the hospital was closed owing to the departure of the Veterinary Assistant for the Army. In 1940 and 1943 the Institution sustained bomb damage. Further damage was incurred in February 1944 by flying bombs. The final destruction of the buildings occurred on 20 July 1944. This marked the end of the Institution's working life. After the War, the London County Council made a compulsory purchase order for the site where the Institution stood and in 1953 paid the University of London £4 700 for it. By that time it had been decided not to rebuild the Institution.

After twenty-five years of legal wrangling it was decided that the Trust Fund should be divided into two and it was shared between the University of London and Trinity College, Dublin. The income from the London share was used to maintain a Fellowship in veterinary pathology at the Royal Veterinary College.

COLLEGIATE COUNCIL

Introductory Note

The Collegiate Council was created on the recommendation of the Hilton Young Report (1) by the Statutes of 1928 with the aim of strengthening the voice of the Schools in the constitutional apparatus and avoiding the faction-fighting in the Senate which had characterised it from 1900. (2) Statute 80 defined its duties as:

'to advise the Senate from time to time as to arrangements for:

- (i) Enabling each School to take an appropriate and adequate share in University teaching;
- (ii) Securing the most advantageous distribution among the institutions of teachers, equipment and facilities for study and research;

and on such other matters as the Senate may prescribe.' (3)

Although composed of heads of Schools (plus the Vice-Chancellor and Principal) (4) the Collegiate Council never acquired the influence that the Hilton Young Commission had intended, particularly in respect to the allocation of resources. Instead it concentrated mainly on the management of central student facilities such as the Boat House, Athletic Grounds, the University of London Union (q.v.), and such matters which fell exclusively within the jurisdiction of Schools, for example the creation of uniform policy on non-Appointed Teachers and members of technical, executive and clinical staffs. (5)

The Joint Standing Committee of the Academic and Collegiate Councils (originally the Interim Joint Standing Committee) was created in 1966 to deal with matters relating to the governance of the University and its Schools, including Visitations (formerly undertaken by the Committee on the Organisation and Administration of Schools) and also to improve the resource-allocation function that was required of the Collegiate Council by Statute. In the event the Joint Standing Committee was judged to be not entirely successful in exercising the latter function which was transferred to the Joint Committee of the Court and Senate for Collective Planning in session 1974/75. (The Joint Standing Committee of the Academic and Collegiate Councils continues to deal with constitutional matters.) However, the Joint Medical Advisory Committee of the Academic and Collegiate Councils, created in 1973, has proved an effective instrument in allocating medical resources and remains active.

In 1980, as part of the wider changes in the governance of the University, the terms of reference of the Collegiate Council were redrawn, thus:

'It shall be the duty of the Collegiate Council:

- (i) to encourage co-operation between Schools and the most effective use of the resources of Schools for the advancement of teaching and research and generally to make recommendations to the Senate from time to time on all matters for which co-ordinated policies or actions between or on behalf of Schools appears desirable to the Council; provided that nothing in this sub-clause shall detract from the right of the Academic Council to advise on any such matter that falls also within its purview;

COLLEGIATE COUNCIL

Introductory Note

- (ii) to formulate the collective views of Heads of Schools and Senate Institutes on matters relating to, or deriving from, their responsibilities as Heads, and to express such views as appropriate to the Court, the Senate or committees of the Senate, or governing bodies of Schools and Senate Institutes;
- (iii) without prejudice to the generality of sub-clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this Statute, to advise the Senate on such matters affecting or relating to student members of the University as do not fall primarily within the responsibility or purview of individual Schools or of the Academic Council, and in particular:
 - (a) on the provision of residential, sporting, social and other recreational amenities for students of the University generally in addition to any provision made by Schools;
 - (b) on University regulations relating to student conduct;
 - (c) on such other matters relating to Students as may from time to time be referred by the Senate to the Council;
- (iv) to advise the Senate on such other matters as the Senate may refer to it.

It shall also be the duty of the Collegiate Council:

- (i) to appoint, on behalf of the Senate, bodies to manage such residential, sporting, social and other recreational amenities for student members of the University as the Senate may from time to time decide, in accordance with such financial constraints as may be laid down by the Court and the Senate; and to review and direct the activities of these bodies;
 - (ii) to exercise such other powers as the Senate may delegate to it.'

CONTEXT

Biographical/Administrative History: The Commerce Degree Bureau was constituted under a Declaration of Trust approved by the Senate of the University of London in July 1920, in connection with the institution of degrees in Commerce and amended in March 1947. The Bureau was officially opened at 46 Russell Square in March 1922.

Until 1947, the Bureau was under the direction of a Board of Governors. In March 1947 the control and management of the Bureau was placed in the hands of a Committee of the Senate known as the 'Commerce Degree Bureau Committee'. The Committee comprised the Vice-Chancellor, the Chairman of Convocation, the Principal and not fewer than eight members appointed annually by the Senate of whom four were appointed by the Council for External Students.

The function of the Bureau was originally to advise and assist external students preparing for the B.Com examinations. In 1922 the work of assisting graduates and students of the University to find employment, previously carried out by the University Appointments Board, was amalgamated with that of the Commerce Degree Bureau, to the Board of which the Appointments Advisory Committee of the Senate reported. Between 1922 and 1938, when the two organisations were separated again, both functions were carried out by the Commerce Degree Bureau and Appointments Board under a single Board of Governors.
