CONTEXT

Biographical/Administrative History: On the 23 September 1954 a group of librarians from different Colleges, Schools and Institutes of the University of London gathered to discuss the formation of an organisation of University of London Librarians. In July 1955 chief librarians of the University of London Librarians met as the Standing Conference of the Librarians of the Libraries of the University of London (SCOLLUL). At this meeting they devised a constitution which defined the object of the SCOLLUL as to consider and take action on matters connected with the libraries of the University. Such matters included library staff salaries and qualifications; completion of union catalogues, and library resources. SCOLLUL came to an end in 1974 and was succeeded by the Library Resources Co-ordinating Committee. In addition, the Senate set up a Committee on Library Resources in 1967 to investigate the possibilities of increasing co-operation in the rationalisation of resources. The Committee presented its report in 1971 and after wide discussion the Library Resources Co-ordinating Committee was established in 1974 as a permanent central activity reporting to the Senate. To promote co-operation, subject sub-committees were set up, based on the Boards of Studies, and each library with a major interest in the subject sent a representative, the aim being to have a balance of librarians and academics. A co-operative approach to computers was also encouraged. A systems analyst was appointed to investigate a scheme to cover acquisitions, cataloguing and issue systems to be shared by a number of libraries. A parallel organisation, Central Information Services, was set up to review the on-line databases that were becoming available. CIS did much useful work in familiarising librarians and academics with a new concept and in running training courses in search techniques. During this period the ULL had a Library Board. The formation of the LRCC affected the University Library in a number of ways. The duties of the Librarian were widened to include overall responsibility for the administration of the Central Information Services, the Depository Library and the committees of the LRCC. The title now became

Director of Central Library Services and Goldsmiths' Librarian and the first holder of the reconstituted post was appointed in 1974. The University Library was itself now an activity of the LRCC and its policies were subjected to wider scrutiny and approval. ACCULL, the Advisory Committee on the University Library, was the ULL official committee during the period 1974-1994. The SCOLLUL was served by an executive committee, which included the Chair and Secretary of the Conference, as well as six other members. The work of the Conference was delegated to various Conference sub committees.

COMMITTEE OF ENQUIRY INTO THE GOVERNANCE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF LONDON (THE MURRAY COMMITTEE)

The Report of the Robbins Committee on Higher Education, published in 1963, stated that there were problems and inconsistencies in the University of London that called for investigation and remedy. It recommended that if the problems could not be resolved internally they 'should be the subject of independent inquiry'. Some reforms were subsequently implemented but by 1969 it was considered that a major investigation of the University's structure was required and, on the initiative of the University, the Committee of Enquiry was established jointly by the University and the University Grants Committee under the chairmanship of Lord Murray of Newhaven. It had the following terms of reference:

In the light of changing circumstances in higher education both in London and in the country generally, to consider and advise on the future of the University of London as a federal institution, with special reference to:

- (a) the functions, powers and composition of the Senate and the composition and responsibilities of its Standing Councils and Committees;
- (b) the functions and powers of Convocation;
- (c) the relationship between the Internal and External degree system;
- (d) the functions, powers and composition of the Court;
- (e) the question of effective participation of staff and students in the decision-making processes directly affecting them;
- (f) the relationship between schools and the University and with each other;
- (g) consequent changes in administrative arrangements and to report thereon.

The Committee was appointed in June 1970 and published its Final Report in November 1972. The process of investigation and discussion continued with the establishment by the University of the Consultative Committee for Co-ordinating Discussion on the Recommendations of the Murray Report (see ST7).

ST 7 CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE FOR CO-ORDINATING DISCUSSION ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE MURRAY COMMITTEE

The Committee was established in November 1972 when the Senate approved, with amendments, a report by the Principal suggesting that a joint Consultative Committee be set up by the Court and the Senate to co-ordinate the discussion on the recommendations of the Murray Report. The Committee held its first meeting in December 1972. Five reports of the Committee were published in November 1973, November 1974, July 1975, October 1975 and December 1975 respectively. A recommendation in the Third Report led to the establishment by the Senate of the Statutes Revision Committee (see ST 8).

UL 6 EXTRA-MURAL LIBRARY (to 1955, 'TRAVELLING LIBRARIES')

The Extra-Mural Library began in 1910 when, at the request of the Board to Promote the Extension of University Teaching, the University Library agreed to accommodate a small collection of books for issue to Tutorial Class students. Collectively known as the Travelling Libraries, it was re-named the Extra-Mural Library in 1955. It continued to be administered by the University Library until 1975 when it became a separate unit of the Central Library Services under the control of the Library Resources Co-ordinating Committee. In August 1981 the Extra-Mural Library became part of the Department of Extra-Mural Studies.

UN 11 UNIVERSITY OF LONDON ATHLETIC UNION

Established in 1906 by a sub-committee of Convocation to promote inter-collegiate competitions, the University of London Athletic Union ceased to exist as an independent body in August 1952 when it merged with the University of London Union.

Following the merger, the administration of the University's athletic activities became the responsibility of the new Men's and Women's Athletic Committees. In 1962, the titles of the Athletic Committees were changed to University Sports Committees.

ALBERT KAHN TRAVELLING FELLOWSHIPS

Albert Kahn, a French banker and philanthropist, established a Travelling Fellowships scheme in 1910. There was no formal connection between the scheme and the University of London but Sir Henry Miers, Principal from 1908 to 1915, was partly instrumental in persuading Kahn to set up the Trust under which 'teachers, scholars, and investigators' were provided with Travelling Fellowships to visit distant lands. Kahn was particularly anxious that Fellows under the scheme should visit countries in the Far East.

The scheme was open to all Britons of sufficient merit who had been nominated by a Vice-Chancellor of a British University, the President of the Royal Society or the President of the British Academy. Those elected as Fellows were required to adhere strictly to the itinerary which had been prescribed for them and to report in writing on their impressions of the countries they had visited. A minimum period of one year was laid down for the duration of the fellowship, which was supported at the minimum rate of £600 per annum.

The body responsible for selecting the Fellows and for approving financial decisions concerning the Foundation, was the Board of Trustees. The membership of the Board consisted of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice, the Speaker of the House of Commons, one nominee of the founder (originally Lord Avebury), the Principal of the University of London and one other member appointed by the other five Trustees. Though the Fellowships were open to any person nominated by the appropriate university or academic body, the actual administration of the Foundation was undertaken by the University of London. The Principal was ex officio the Honorary Secretary of the Foundation, while the permanent secretary to the Trustees was a member of the University staff.

The Foundation was dependent for its financial provision on the annual subventions made by Kahn, which varied from year to year according to the number of Fellows and their itineraries. In 1931, at the height of world economic crisis, Kahn succumbed to the ill effects of the depression. He found himself unable to provide the necessary finance needed for the Fellowship Scheme. The Foundation, as a consequence, became moribund and no more Fellows were elected. Attempts in 1938 and 1939 at a revival of the Foundation all proved fruitless. It was wound up in 1948.

VP 12 PHOTOGRAPHIC AND OTHER PORTRAITS

These portraits were found in the Library stack in 1985. They appear to have been transferred there in the early 1960s from the Muniment Room (later, 'Strong Room') in the Senate House basement where they had been discovered. They were at that time in frames and those dating from before 1936 had probably been hung in the University's offices at South Kensington before the move to Bloomsbury. The series of photographs of Vice-Chancellors now (1987) hanging outside the office of the Vice-Chancellor and Principal begins with Professor David Hughes Parry (1945-8) and together with the items listed below makes a complete set of portraits of Vice-Chancellors from the foundation of the University to 1985.

Portraits of post-war VC's are on display on the 1st floor Senate House. Photography can be arranged via the VC's office 15/3/84
